

Contests

Meme Monday - Best Bitcoin

Meme Gets 5,000 CCs

445 sats \ 9 comments \ @sn 31 Mar memes bot

6737 sats \ 0 replies \ @nym 31 Mar

890 500

$85232

Mar 29 - Apr 2

ISSUE #2

Note from the Editor

I am sending you a Howdy Doo!
Here we are again, Hurray!
My aim in establishing this as the wallet issue is to highlight this important feature of SN that you could potentially overlook! SN makes you the captain of your own sats, cuz that's how cowboys do it. No yuppies grubby mitts on my stack!

for sending AND receiving

made in Austin
by @plebpoet
with @k00b
in cahoots

Discussion

100 sats \ 2 replies \ @BlokchainB 31 Mar

I think the wallets and POS systems are still too difficult for the common person to use. For example I been thinking about how I can tip my barber in sats and not cash.
Tell him to download strike? Most people roll their eyes and don't want to deal with another app. Then let's say you get them to download the app the next is ask how do I turn this into cash/money I can spend.
So I just gave up

83 sats \ 0 replies \ @anon 31 Mar

I get the sense that it is on people's mind (people being lightning devs) but their daily operations/ money-making sustaining work/ interests take them other places before this one.
I would want to explain to a small business owner why saving in bitcoin long term is a good plan, and this is of more importance than the ability to accept a new form of money for small purchases in their shop. So there's a misalignment, as I see it.
But you're right, the gap is widened by the friction in the tech.
Still, I think there's lessons to learn particularly from Square and Cashapp.....didn't their innovations serve the small business owner first? And treat them as primary?

Top Art
Choose Your Own Adventures -
Existential Dread Edition

470 sats \ 2 comments \ @antic 1 Apr art

Who could Bitcoin builders be serving better?

3540 sats \ 22 comments \ @birdeye21 31 Mar bitcoin

SMB owners

I've observed a lot of focus on tools for the individual, and services for corporations/institutions, but I have yet to see dedicated Bitcoin services tailored for the mom n pop shops and other small local businesses.

Are they out there? Or is it a niche not worth dedicating more energy to?

For me, this feels like a particularly odd niche to be forgoing attention given their prevalence. 60% of businesses in the US have less than 5 employees. ~90% have fewer than 20.

I've pondered for some time wondering if it's a segment that bitcoiners could be better equipping, and what I could do to help them personally. But it's hard to decipher if this is an obvious gap in attention, or a mere extension of what's already available for individual support.

Who else are we underserving in your opinion?

361 sats \ 9 replies \ @justin_shocknet 31 Mar

"niche not worth dedicating more energy to?"

Bingo, untold resources have already been wasted trying to force Bitcoin as a payments system in the meat space, that's not where its product market fit is because there's not a real problem there to be solved. ...Paying attention to this wrong thing has left gaps in other areas though of course, its entirely our fault that micro-services and things susceptible to chargebacks on the internet are not using Bitcoin/Lightning. There's people catching on to the fact that Bitcoin should be the native currency of AI, but even simpler than that, things like VPS/VPN/Mail Relay and things like that in a hostile internet environment are prime candidates... its just that the tooling for this still sucks horribly as we've collectively built everything but what is needed.

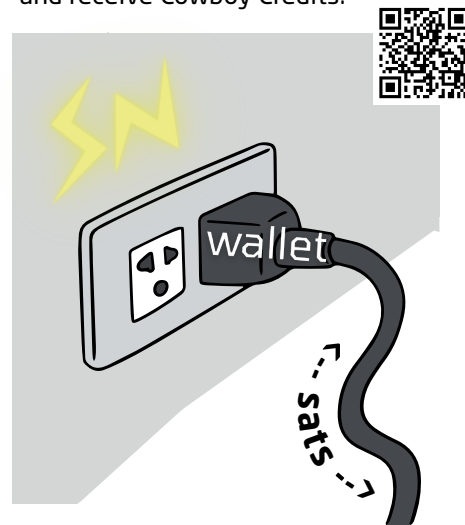

Frequently Asked Questions

1121 sats \ 256 comments \ @k00b 15 Jul 2021 bitcoin freebie

Wallets

Stacker News is non-custodial. To send and receive sats, you need to attach a wallet. If you don't attach a wallet, you will send and receive Cowboy Credits.

SN resolves to go noncustodial on Jan. 3rd - FAQ & AMA

141 sats \ 237 comments \ @k00b 18 Dec 2024 meta

Top Comment

232 sats \ 10 replies \ @elvismrcury 24 Dec 2024

This will reveal that I am a dumbass, but I'm finally making the jump and attempting to set up a lightning node and hook it up to SN like a big boy. I know there are many LN guides about how to do this wrt specific node software (e.g., LND, phoenixd, Core Lightning, et al.) but is there something that explains stuff in a SN-specific way?

155 sats \ 0 replies \ @k00b OP 24 Dec 2024
There's a collection of community written guides: #816152

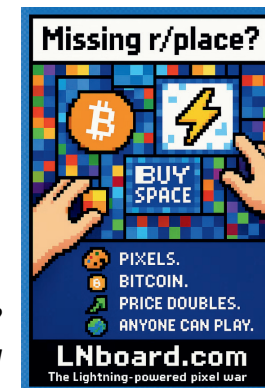

find guides here!

Missing r/place?

LNboard.com is the Lightning Network's Anarchy Art Gallery

774 sats \ 40k boost \ 19 comments \ @f0e6f4f43b
Apr 1 lightning

Remember when the internet was weird and fun?
Reddit's r/place captures that spirit perfectly - and now there's a Bitcoin Lightning version.

Does Extreme Wealth Change People?

1499 sats \ 51 comments \ @denililaapan 29 Mar Ask5N

I've been dogsitting/house-sitting for some friends (a couple in their late 50s) this week. They're wonderful people and we get along well, though their combined net worth is easily like 100x mine (so, technically 50... cuz there's two of them!)

Relevant because their house is in-sane.

... and it's remarkably how little it affects me. This is just not what I value, not what makes a dent in my life or mental state.

It was pretty shocking to me how quickly life here in this comparative palace of a place became quodrian — eat, sleep, work out, listen to Bitcoin podcasts, bathroom breaks, play chess on my phone (#853488). The human universals, I'm guessing, are the same in the elite echelons of society as they are for me.

A similar question came up in JRE today too (well, I guess yesterday) with the TRIGGERnometry guys Konstantin Kisin and Francis Foster. Konstantin asked Joe Rogan:

"You've made a lot of money. How have you dealt with that?"

Joe thought for a minute and then responded that it hadn't. First he said that it was because he works out so much... "therefore regular life doesn't freak me out so much."

But then he added something quite insightful: Top Boost

"You might think that it's the numbers in the bank account that counts, but what really counts is how you feel, how you're handling life"

Whatcha think, Stackers?

Stacker's thoughts:

241 sats \ 4 replies \ @jimmysong 29 Mar

This is why getting rich slowly is a blessing. It gives you time to acclimate and frankly, mature, before you get to the next stage. People that are given lots of money at once (lotto winners, casino winners, sports stars) generally don't handle windfalls well and you can tell because they end up with divorces and few friends just 3-5 years later.

The slow growing wealth has generally sorted people out in the Bitcoin community. The people that can't handle wealth do something dumb with it (like altcoins) and lose it. It's not a coincidence that a lot of people that have pumped Bitcoin in the past are now pumping altcoins, in jail or something in between.

I suspect a lot of the spiritual searching that I've seen in Bitcoiners is from this dilemma. If you don't have a good base of morals to operate from, you're not going to be able to handle being rich.

110 sats \ 2 replies \ @denililaapan OP 29 Mar

Indeed. And one implication of the post, too, is that living a small bit of a rich person's life for a short time doesn't set you up for such errors. Like I point to, it just feels off and unimportant. Whereas if I had been magically awarded enough money to buy this house, then getting it would be disastrous since I hadn't worked up the moral base to steward it well

896 sats \ 4 replies \ @DarthCoin 29 Mar

you have no idea what is "wealth", yioiu think that some numbers in a wallet is wealth... you are wrong. wealth is time. time to be spend as you like. and is not luxury or other bullshit cars, palace, mansions or other crap. a simple life and a lot of time to spend in peace worth more than gazillions numbers. I really wish btc price will dump to 1usd so all of you will get rekt because many of you are still fiat maxis that have no fucking idea what is bitcoin.

26 sats \ 2 replies \ @gnilma 30 Mar

Reminds me of an old Chinese phrase from the Ming dynasty that I learned back in my early 20s and kept it to heart. 廣廈千間，夜眠僅需六尺；家財萬貫，日食不過三餐。 Roughly translates to: Owning a thousand grand mansions, you only need 6 feet to sleep; having millions in wealth, you only eat three meals a day.

At the same time, I wouldn't deny the advantages of being wealthy. Wealth gives you optionality and saves you time. If money is human time and energy in an abstracted form, then having more money allows you to command and utilize more human time and energy. As a result, saving yourself from having to spend your own time and energy on things you do not wish to do. I guess at the end of the day, it's not a bad thing to become wealthy; just don't turn into an asshole when it happens.